

Sustainability Perspectives

Gendered and Racialized Spaces: Understanding the Experiences of Women in the New York City Community Garden Environment

Richaela Primus '12 is a Masters candidate at SUNY-ESF. Globally, women comprise the majority of urban farmers. Similarly, most NYC garden projects are led by women concerned with changing their communities through gardening, by creating access to green space and healthy food. Some gardeners discover that city policies inhibit their ownership of and access to garden land while others describe race and class-based biases in funding opportunities and paid work available in urban agriculture.

Monday, February 8, 2016 ~ 12:20 – 1:20PM
Stratton Hall Room 209

All Sustainability Perspectives series events are free and open to the public. The series explores the concept of sustainability from a variety of viewpoints.

Wells is committed to providing access to all events; anyone needing assistance should contact Marian Brown, Center for Sustainability and the Environment, at 315-364-3304 or by email at mbrown@wells.edu, as soon as possible.

Wells College

The education of an extraordinary life.