

Bobbi Wilding is the Deputy Director and co-founder of Clean and Healthy New York, a state-level advocacy organization promoting safe chemicals, a sustainable economy, and a healthy world.

She is a frequent author of CHNY's reports, including recently "The Mattress Still Matters: Protecting Babies and Toddlers While They Sleep" and "Coming Clean on Cleansers Ingredient Disclosure by Five Leading Cleaning Product Makers."

She directs the national Getting Ready for Baby campaign, aimed at ensuring all products made for babies are free of harmful chemicals. She has spent her professional life working for advocacy organizations including Citizens Environmental Coalition and NYPIRG.

She holds a MS in Ecological Economics, Values, and Policy and a BS in Environmental Science from Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute.