

Keeley McGarr-O'Brien is an agricultural sustainability researcher, currently pursuing her PhD with Teagasc-the National Agri-Food Research Body for Ireland, and Wageningen University & Research in the Netherlands. Keeley is from the Finger Lakes, received her BSc in Animal Science and Ag Entrepreneurship from the University of Vermont, and her MSc in Agroforestry and Food Security from Bangor University in Wales. Her research center is based in Cork, Ireland.