Long-term Changes in Mountain Ecosystems - Human-Landscape Interactions

Jana Müllerová is the deputy head of the GIS and Remote Sensing department at the Institute of Botany of the Czech Academy of Sciences in Průhonice, Czech Republic. Her research specialty is vegetation ecology, focusing on plant-environmental interactions and spatio-temporal vegetation changes, and human influences on vegetation and landscapes. This past year, Dr. Müllerová has been a Fulbright Visiting Scholar at the University of Colorado at Boulder; her appearance at Wells was made possible through support of the Fulbright Outreach Lecturing Fund.
